Thoughts for a Wildlife Reserve on Luxulyan Flood Plain.

The flood plain below Bridges following along from Rosevale gardens and adjacent to the river would make an ideal place for a community wildlife reserve. The river could be diverted into a series of ponds and wetlands accessed by board walks and the water finally returned to the river further down by the weir.

This could become a valuable area for all kinds of wildlife and also the possibility of helping to solve the flooding problem further down and also benefit everyone in the community. The access could be from behind the shop into Ross Tonkins field and instead of walking diagonally across, go straight down over an existing bridge to the old tramway and across to the river where a new bridge over the river would be built.

It may be possible to continue a path to the river and return to the Saint's Way and on into the valley.

This does all depend on who owns that piece of land and if they are willing for this improvement to happen.
